"I wish the people were here this morning,"
fervently ejaculated one of the brethren.
Bishop Holsey in his address dwelt upon the adaptation of Christianity to all conditions of life. He deplored what he described as the loss of spiritual power in the church. "I have been asked," observed the bishop, "why many emi-nent divines, authors of books, did not preach sanctification. I said it is because these men are too big for Christ." He referred to the fine choirs, elegant churches, and splendid preachers of the modern church, as things which had ed the church astray. The bishop's hearers formed a company of about fitty colored ministers and lay delegates, assembled in the Sunday school room of Israel church. The conference territory embrace Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Mary-Rev. F. M. Hamilton, presiding elder of this district, was chosen secretary of the conference. It was decided to hold sessions each day from 9:30 a. L. to 2 p. m. When the bishop proposed to establish a bar of the conference, one of the young ministers protested, saying:
"Oh, let us be a little sociable, and sit around among the ladies." "The trouble is," said the bishop, "that at times we are likely to be too sociable." The front seats were divided off by an imaginary line as sacred to members of the confer

One member complained that the candidates were frightened when they came before the committee, and there was no way of ascertainng what there qualifications were. Bishop Holsey gave an amusing description of the manner in which old gray-headed and spectacled presiding elders, steeped in ignorance themselves, would examine a candidate. "It is no wonder they tremble," said the bishop.

The bishop announced the following committees: On education—G.W. Usher, R.S. Williams, C. M. Blount; church literature—J.S. Smothers, B. J. Hargraves, B. L. Davis; state of religion—H. W. Madison, J. The bishop made an address in which, speaking of the relations of the C. M. E. church with the Southern M. E. church he said the continue. the Southern M. INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

lished with the aid of white brethren, the bishop spoke of industrial education, saying there was a tendency among the ministry to depreciate the dignity of labor. He referred to depreciate the dignity of labor. He referred to one minister, as neat as a pin, who was ashamed to carry a ham through the streets to his wife. "He looks just as like a spider-legged dude," said the bishop, "as anything I ever saw, That is not my idea of a minister."

Rev. P. C. Lewis, late of the Alabama conference of the M. E. church, who has recently been engaged at work in Hillsdale, D. C., was received by vote into the conference. Bishop Holsey cautioned the candidate that he was coming into a very dry field, where the people were poor, and there were no big salaries or soft places. During the discussion on the admission of Mr. Lewis, Rev. Mr. McDade made some re-

Mr. Lewis, Rev. Mr. McDade made some remarks, expressing the hope that members of the conference would not go to work and undermine the new brother. He referred to members of the church who, he said, used the dagger.

One of the members suggested that Mr. McDade, if he intended to reflect upon any one, shou'd challenge him by name, and not criminate the whole conference.

Mr. McDade said he was simply following out what the bishop had said about brotherly feeling. "What is sauce for the goose," he added, "ought certainly not be unpalatable to the gander."

GRANT AND JOHNSON. An Exciting Cabinet Meeting in Recor struction Days.

THE RECORD WHICH EX-PRESIDENT JOHNSON SHOWED A PROMINENT TENNESSEE MAN-

GRANT DENOUNCED BY JOHNSON AND WELLES.

Gen. Rolfe S. Saunders, of Tennessee, who has been prominent in the politics of that state for many years, in talking to a STAR reporter this morning declared, in the strongest terms, his disbelief in Mr. Chauncy M. Depew's account of Gen. Grant's recollections of certain interviews between himself and President Andrew Johnson. "Why," said Gen. Saunders "Grant hated Johnson worse than any man the time Grant related his version of the affair to Depew he was a different man from what he became later. After his afflictions and misfortunes he grew penitent, but when he talked with Depew he was full of vindictive hatred of Johnson. In 1871 I was sitting in ex-President Johnson's library with him, in Green-ville, Tenn. He was talking of his experiences as President, and remarked: 'I'll show you NAVAL ORDERS.—Capt. R. L. Law, ordered to command the League Island, Pa., navy yard; a newspaper. It was a detailed record of what had occurred at a memorable cabinet meeting. These volumes contained the minutes of all the cabinet meetings of Johnson's administration. The proceedings were set forth in a clear hand. I read the record of the meeting to which he had called my attention. It contained the expressions of the opinions of the cabinet members concerning Grant's course with regard to the secretaryship of war. He had, as is well known, consented to take that position for the purpose of aiding the administration to get Stanton out. In that very meeting he was accused by the President and his continuate ministers. cabinet ministers of treachery and double-dealing. Gideon Welles employed the strongest language in denouncing Grant's conduct, and I never read such an excoriation as the President gave Grant. In language as forcible as Johnson could employ—and he knew how to use vigorous English—he denounced Grant for his deception and treachery. He charged him with having played the spy upon the adminis-tration and the cabinet. After having read the denunciation, I asked Mr. Johnson where Grant was at the time. He replied with great earnesthim, as close to me as you are, and duroverwork.—Mr. Snowden Ashford, of this city, has been elected president of his class at Lafayette College, Pa.—Sen tor Logan, Assistant Secretary Coon, General Van Vliet and Superintendent Kimball, of the Life Saving Service, were registered in New York last night.—Senator Eustis is at the Arlington.—

Mr. Snowden Ashford, of this class at the Arlington.—In the delivery of my remarks I shook my finger right in his face.'

"He, Grant," continued Gen. Saunders, "ne ther looked up nor replied, so President Johnson told me. Now, it is plain to be seen that Grant was moved by vindictive spite in telling what he did. It's absurd. Mr. Johnson telling what he did. It's absurd. Mr. Johnson was not socially tabooed. It is true there were was not socially tabooed. It is true there were people who didn't like him, but he was governor of the state, United States Senator, etc., and had as high a social position as anybody. Again, there were very few southern men here in Washington at the time Grant refers to. I was elected to Congress from the Memphis district in 1865 and came on here, but never got my seat. I know that very few of the leaders of southern sentiment and opinion were here about that time. Johnson never did say, either, that traitors should be hung. He said treason should be made odious and traitors punished.

> Stanton and Grant. WHAT THE FORMER'S PRIVATE SECRETARY SAYS. Major Johnson, who was Secretary Stanton's private secretary, says he believes from what he saw and heard before Stanton left the cabi-net, that the story told by Mr. Chauncy M. Depew about Gen. Grant and President John-son is true. He could not, of course, speak rom knowledge of what occurred at the White treason." Prominent democrats were about the White House, and the President was feasted and wined by them, and they were on a friendly footing. This was what Secretary tanton and northern Senators were talking of with uneasiness, and it was what made Stanton want to stay in the cabinet—though he had wanted to resign under Lincoln. Grant had been looked upon as a supporter of the President, but just then it was talked about that they had quarreled, and it was Grant who first informed Stanton of Johnson's ntention to put him out of the cabinet. Grant had just had an interview with the President, and went at once from the White House to the Var department and made the revelation. "Swinging Around the Circle." CELERRATED TRIP OF JOHNSON AND GRANT. The only person now in Washington who attended President Johnson in the celebrated "swing around the circle" was Col. W. G. Moore, who was then one of the President's secretaries. A STAR reporter called his attention to-day to statements in the N. Y. Herald to-day attributed to Gen. Horace Porter as to the President's actions and bearing on that trip towards Gen. Grant and Admiral Farragut. Gen. Porter is reported as saying:

"Well, Mr. Johnson, with a view to converting the people to his political views, inaugurated a trip through the country which is now known in history as 'swinging around the cir-cle.' He ordered Gen. Grant and Admiral Farragut to accompany him, so that they would appear to give their countenance to the trip. hey were very reluctant to go. Gen. Grant, at first regarding it merely as an invitation, endeavored to decline it as politely as possible, but it was put in the form of an order, and he had to obey. A great many disagreeable scenes occurred on the expedition. Mr. Johnson made a series of speeches at the different stopping places, which generally consisted of gross attacks upon which generally consisted of gross attacks upon Congress, and it was soon seen that they were not meeting with much favor from the large crowds of people that assembled about the train when it arrived at stations. The President spoke from the rear platform of the car. At first the general and the admiral accompa-At first the general and the admiral accompanied him to the platform out of politeness. Before he proceeded far in his speech the crowd would commence yelling for Grant and Farragut, and the President seemed to get the idea that these officers had appeared alongside of him to take the wind out of his sails. To avoid any feeling of this kind the officers would go to the front of the train and take their positions there while the President spoke from the rear. The crowds would then rush to the front of the train and cry out for Grant and Farragut, leaving the President with a very diminished audience in the rear. He doubtless thought that this was another ingenious move to annoy him, and the breach became still more widened, particularly between him and General Grant."

came still flore witched, particularly between him and General Grant."

Col. Moore said: "I never heard the President make any complaint on that score."

"Did he think Gen. Grant and Amiral Farrasails?" asked the reporter.

"I never had any intimation," answered Col. Moore, "that the President complained or had any cause of complaint against those gentlemen on that trip. I never heard the President make any reference to this particular subject. During the trip his relations were cordial, and he appeared to be on good terms with all those who accompanied him. I have no recollection now as to whether Gen. Grant was ordered or invited to accompany the President. At some places," he continued, in answer to the reporter's inquiries, "the people hooted the President. There was much political excitement you know."

"Did the President attribute his reception at such places to Gen. Grant or others with him?"

"No, he did not," said the colonel. "As I have said before, I never heard him complain of the conduct of those gentlemen on that trip."

The Belt-Godfrey Divorce Case. NO COMPROMISE. In reply to an inquiry by a STAR reporter Mr. Henry Wise Garnett, of counsel for Mrs. Belt, said "I notice in the morning papers of this city, a dispatch from Baltimore in regard to the case of Belt agt. Belt, in which it is stated that through the interference of friends a settlement had been effected. Such a statement, conveying as it does the idea of a compromise, is utterly unfounded in fact, so far as Mrs. Belt is concerned. That lady placed her cause entirely in the hands of her counsel, who, upon receiving notice from Mr. Belt's counsel of his absolute and unconditional surrender, dictated the terms of the decree, which was passed by the court. No compromise could or would have been made." Henry Wise Garnett, of counsel for Mrs. Belt, A REAL ESTATE SALE.—Amos Webster and John B. Larner, trustees, have sold to J. He said it was for the same offense as that charged in the first count-larceny and obtaining goods under false pretences. There were, therefore, two distinct crimes charged in different counts of the same indictment. Judge Barrett replied that if the two crimes were really but different aspects of the same facts they could properly be embraced under the same indictment. As the court considered the crimes as different aspects of the same facts the demurrer was overruled. The prisoner was called on to plead again and his counsel changed his plea to not guilty. It is estimated that there are now about 1,200 retail liquor dealers in the state who have government mits but have not complied with the state pro-hibition law, and the state temperance union wants the evidence from this collector's office to be used in prosecuting them. The collector appealed to Joseph S. A BALTIMORS SUIT FOR SLANDER FOR $10,000.—James L. Kernen, proprietor of the Monumental theater in Baltimore, yesterday entered suit against Mones C. Hodgdon, a stock broker, claiming $10,000 damages for an alleged slander. Kernen declares that when he was appointed to a public office two weeks ago Hodgdon found fault and charged that his (Kernen's) theater was disreputable. On this is based the claim for damages.
